

VISITING THE SMITHSONIAN AMERICAN ART MUSEUM

---

Smithsonian American Art Museum

The Smithsonian
American Art Museum
is a big building with many pieces of art.

Visitors can come to the museum to look at
and learn about art.

Arrival

Visitors enter the museum through revolving doors. The museum doors are heavy.

If visitors do not want to go through the revolving doors, they can use the regular door next to it.

Security

There will be a security guard inside the lobby. Security guards keep the visitors and the art safe.

Visitors can ask the security guards questions.

Lockers

SAAM has lockers in the lobby. Lockers hold people's belongings while they visit the museum. Visitors can choose to put items in the lockers.

Seating

The museum is a big place. Sometimes visitors need a place to rest.

There are benches and couches in the museum where visitors may sit.

Artwork

In the museum visitors will see many different kinds of art.

Art can be made out of many different materials.

Visitors will see paintings, sculptures, and even art made out of license plates!

Artwork

Visitors may not touch the art because it could get damaged.

There are signs in the museum that remind visitors not to touch.

If visitors get too close to a piece of art, an alarm might go off to let visitors know to back up.

There is so much for visitors to see
at the Smithsonian
American Art Museum!
